

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of accessing a web page from a plurality of servers over the Internet include receiving a request for the web page from a client computer at a load balancer and sending the request to a first server of the plurality of servers. The load balancer receives the web page from the first server and adds an identity of the first server to all URLs on the web page that reference the plurality of servers. The load balancer then forwards the data to the client computer.